Faro's Daughter is not my favourite book from Georgette Heyer (sadly, now deceased), although it was entertaining. The heroine, Deb, is a bit OTT in her machinations and I found it difficult to like her at times. New readers of Georgette Heyer's work should bear in mind that these books were written many years ago, before permissiveness became prevalent so they cannot really be compared to ...

Faro's Daughter is one of Georgette Heyer's popular Regency romances. Faro was a popular card-game of the day, and the chief character in the novel is Deborah Grantham, a tall young woman with laughing, dark eyes, who sits all night at the tables in-the polite gaming-house in St James's Square run by her aunt, Lady Bellingham.

At Faros Daughter we believe that those opening their hearts and homes to vulnerable children have just as many needs as new parents. Children may be brought to them in the middle of the night with only a few hours notice. They might be receiving a child for the first time or growing their current family.
