~~Kevin Shillington The study of African history came of age in the 1960s, coinciding with the emergence of many newly-independent modern African states. ~~Shillington's "History of Africa" serves its purpose; namely, an introduction and historical survey of the history of Africa from ancient to modern time. The historical accuracy of the text - especially concerning the time before the bronze age - is seriously dubious, and moot at best.~~

~~Shillington acknowledges humanity's African origins, but considers the early folks were probably brown (not the de rigueur black); that ironworking was probably introduced via the Maghrib (rather than diffusing from black Meroe); considers Napata and Meroe to have been civilized from Egypt (rather than the other way around); and does not insist that the ancient Egyptians were all dark Africoids.~~
