technological advancement in the nations especially in the advanced nations. Of important is the incubator centres in the nations and the right business environment created to allow the proliferation of such jobs that could be created with technology that is phasing out and had phased out many jobs across nations. In the poor nations, capital and technology add to the soaring rate of unemployment in those nations. Candidly speaking, there is need to buttress the phasing out of jobs across climes and the urgent need to replace those victims with new jobs especially those jobs they can start with zero capital under self-employment, the best form of employment from the condensed words of the noblest man sent to all creatures. Author Amusa Abdulateef has indirectly predicted that new jobs must be continually created to avoid the spiral effects of increasing unemployment and underemployment threatening the economies of the nations. At the outset of computer technology, such jobs related to secretarial studies, stenographic, some factory jobs among others were virtually eliminated. Many educational jobs are done by computer programmed that we have online tutorials without teachers. Telemedicine is threatening jobs in the health sector. Computers, via quality software, are doing the works of auditors, editors, accountants and many other once lucrative professions. With technology, huge costs of producing films and documentaries are going south as thrilling films could be acted inside a living room or even inside swimming pool. Today, robots are working in factories and selling in shops as drones are delivery products to doorsteps and even running errands; driverless cars, trains and even planes are replacing labour-intensive jobs. Without doubt, unless technology advancement is regulated, everyone may lose their jobs to software that drives computers. The question is 'what becomes of those trained professionals whose jobs have been lost or threatening by the improved computer technology?' The answer to the poser is in starting such jobs that could be technology-controlled or dependent. We are in the world of e-commerce, e-jobs in different sectors. All nations are now adopting e-health, e-agriculture, e-trading and several others internet-induced jobs. It is apparently that the jobs are capital-intensive. With the hows to start jobs with references to the inputs needed, the author Amusa Abdulateef concisely illustrates how such technology-enhanced e-jobs can be started with zero capital. These e-jobs from the transformation which we highlighted in a section of the three section-book make the titled JOBS WITH ZERO CAPITAL VOL. TWO a hit among the books on employment generation. The contents of the book serve as eye opener for those jobs that could be started without a dime and the involvement of technology and the right environment to start operation and be productive contributing to the socio-economic needs of the nations. There are within useful steps to take and the right inputs needed to start such jobs with practical analogies based on first-hand experiences. As his usual style, the author, Amusa Abdulateef, has researched deeply into what inputs and resources required to identify business opportunities in the right environment and how idle hands can tap into them to start new jobs without any stringent conditions or collateral to secure capital from financial institutions. This is the main book exposing the users into jobs with zero-capital. The invaluable prized asset book is the remaining stock for the entrepreneurial

Many companies are downsizing as a result of financial losses due to low patronage. The number of workers being laid off increases daily. Digital technology is replacing people in jobs. People across the globe are looking for jobs, and there is a dire need for the creation of new jobs. In Creating New Jobs from the Existing Jobs, author Amusa Abdulateef presents an array of researched-based, practical, and inventive ideas for creating new jobs. He first identifies the traits of entrepreneurs and discusses ways to develop and increase one's entrepreneurial skills. Using anecdotes and examples from real-life situations, Abdulateef discusses the ins and outs of creating both new entrepreneurs and new jobs, along with the challenges facing both. Filled with an array of ideas for starting and maintaining a thriving business, Creating New Jobs from the Existing Jobs, offers both motivation and a host of strategies to help entrepreneurs generate new employment opportunities and create new jobs from existing jobs.

This book focuses on zero hours and on-call work as an extreme form of casual and precarious employment. It includes country studies of the USA, Canada, Australia, the UK, New Zealand and Ireland, where there has been increasing concern about the prevalence of such work, and working time uncertainty, as well as varying levels of public policy debate on regulation. The book incorporates a comparative review of zero hours work based on the findings of the country studies. This pays particular attention to state regulatory responses to zero hours work, and incorporates the sociological concepts of accumulation and legitimation functions of the state. Exploring the regulation of zero hours work beyond individual countries, the book includes an analysis of external regulation of zero hours work at the supranational level, namely the European Union and ILO. Further, it assesses the implications of zero hours for workers in new sectors of economic activity, particularly the impact of the platform or 'gig' economy on the fundamental nature of the employment relationship. It also considers the societal implications of zero hours work and the ethical responsibilities of employers and

This book analyzes key aspects of Marx's Capital with an eye towards its relevance for an understanding of issues confronting us in the 21st Century. The contributions to this volume suggest that while aspects of Marx's original analysis must be adjusted to take into account changes that have occurred since its initial publication in 1867, his overall perspective remains necessary for understanding the nature of crises in 21st century. Part I emphasizes the central concepts Marx employed in Capital, including exploitation, capital accumulation, commodity fetishism, and his use of dialectics as a method for baring the underlying relations that define capitalism. Parts II and III extend that focus by addressing the concept of value, fictitious capital, credit and financialization. Parts IV and V offer analyses of several concrete manifestations of contemporary crises from national contexts (Europe, Latin America, China, and the United States). The volume argues that we have to combat the imperatives of capitalism to move towards a more humane and egalitarian future.
