The above remarks are occasioned by Peter Straub's MR. X, for which my fond, foolish hopes were of course shattered upon the adamantine, also reckless, selfishness so much a part, whether he knows it or not (and it is safe to say he doesn't, not at all, believe me) of my friend's character. I should have known better.

Mr X Peter Straub - apocalypseourien.be
Peter Straub writes horror the way F.D. James writes mystery ---that is to say, both of these authors rise above their genres by virtue of complexity and style. In MR. X, Straub returns to the chilling world of the supernatural with an intensity his readers have not seen in his novels since GHOST STORY and THE TALISMAN (co-authored with Stephen King).
